

AMERICAN SIGN LANGUAGE CERTIFICATE: 220

Total Credits: 27

Catalog Edition: 2021-2022

Program Description

(R): 220

The certificate program in American Sign Language is designed to provide students with a foundation in ASL and would benefit those pursuing business or other service-oriented fields where they might be called upon to communicate directly with Deaf clients. The program also serves students preparing to enter an Interpreter Training Program; students whose first language is ASL and who desire to learn the structure and syntax of the language; and students desiring to improve their understanding of Deaf culture to better communicate with Deaf family, friends, neighbors, and community.

Related Careers

There are many promising career opportunities for people who are proficient in American Sign Language (ASL). The Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that the demand for Sign Language Interpreters is expected to grow 46% from 2012 to 2022, which represents a surge of 29,300 jobs. The requirements for interpreters vary from licensing, formal preparation (Associates, Bachelors or Masters) to doctoral degrees.

Being fluent in ASL can also open doors to specialized careers in various fields, including therapy, technology, education, health, tourism and many other recreational services, to name a few.

American Sign Language Mentoring Program

Our ASL Mentoring Program creates opportunities for ASL students to remain on course to complete program requirements and to stay engaged in the acquisition of language skills. If you have questions that you want to ask an experienced or native signer, or if you just want to practice ASL, you can have free, one-on-one or group mentoring sessions. For more information about ASL mentoring, contact the Department of World Languages and Philosophy (Rockville, Macklin Tower, Room 429; 240-567-5393).

Important Facts

Why should I learn American Sign Language (ASL) at MC?

Our students are motivated to study ASL for a variety of professional and personal reasons. Many of our students are interested in becoming interpreters, so gaining fluency in ASL and learning more about Deaf culture are integral first steps. Others are pursuing fields like education, speech-language pathology, audiology, counseling, or social work, where they will benefit from knowledge of ASL. Even if their major does not explicitly require knowledge of ASL, students in many different service-related positions—childcare, retail, and more—discover ASL to be an asset when interacting with Deaf community members.

In addition to opening the door to many professional opportunities, students often study ASL for personal reasons. Many of our students study ASL because they wish to communicate with Deaf family and friends. Some of our students are Deaf or hard of hearing themselves and study ASL to learn more about the structure and syntax of their own language; others are international students who use different sign languages and want to learn American Sign Language as well. Regardless of your motivation, you will find committed instructors, relevant content, and engaged student peers in our program.

Do you have prior experience with ASL?

The Department of World Languages and Philosophy has an assessment instrument to place students out of ASLP100. Please contact us (Macklin Tower 429; 240-567-5393) if you have prior experience with ASL, and we will help you meet with the ASL coordinator or a faculty member to evaluate your skills. Please note, at this time we do not offer credit by exam. If you are majoring or seeking a degree in ASL, you must meet with the department chair and/or an ASL advisor to discuss course substitution to meet General Education distribution requirements.

Can I get both the AA and the certificate?

Yes! In fact, we recommend that all students pursuing the A.A. in ASL also declare their intent to pursue a certificate as well. The overlap in required courses means that you can pursue both simultaneously and graduate from MC with both a degree and a credential. If you have declared your major and are currently pursuing the AA but not the certificate, contact an advisor today to add the certificate.
